

PARENTING YOUNG INNOVATORS

An Interactive Workshop

Friday, October 24

Covington School Multipurpose Room

205 Covington Road, Los Altos

How can parents give kids tools they need to create in the modern world? How do you have reflective conversations with your kids?

Innovators have the power to improve their world in big and small ways while leading fulfilling lives. Young people who grow into adult innovators will make an impact as professionals, citizens, and community members. They will also have the ability to shape their personal lives in ways that lead to greater happiness and fulfillment. What traits and tools do innovators need to utilize? And what can parents do to help nurture them?

Glen Tripp, Founder and CEO of Galileo Learning, will reflect on lessons learned from working with the 200,000 children who have attended Galileo's innovation-oriented enrichment programs. Parenting strategies will be covered.
